AUG'S BLOG

Visitation Families,

We have entered Holy Week, the holiest of all weeks in the Catholic Church. How has Lent changed your heart this year? If not, perhaps this week can help turn your heart to Our Lord.

A week of silence.

A week of listening.

A week of contemplation.

A week of meditation.

A week of adoration.

May it be for us a passage:

from darkness to light,

from hatred to love,

from the Cross to Glory,

from death to life.

From the Center for Catholic School Leadership

TRIDUUM

This year, the Divine Mercy Family of Parishes will celebrate the Triduum as a family. This is to enable each parish location to experience a part of the Triduum at their respective church. We are however, strongly encouraging all members of the Divine Mercy Family to attend all three liturgies at the various locations so that the Triduum may be experienced fully and completely as the Church intends.

The Triduum schedule is as follows:

Holy Thursday – 7:00 pm at St. Joseph

Good Friday – 12 noon at St. Jude

Easter Vigil – 8:30 pm at Visitation

The Church's recommendation is to have all liturgies occur at a primary church, but during this continual transition we will continue to share one of the liturgies at each parish church.

As always, your understanding is appreciated.

Fr. Don Siciliano, Pastor

VENERATION OF THE CROSS

Due to the large crowd, there will be communal veneration of the cross during the Good Friday liturgy. Following the liturgy there will be individual veneration of the cross until 3:00 pm.

Spring Break! Students are off on Good Friday thru and including April 8th. They return on the 9th. Students may begin the warm weather uniform on April 9th. I'm feeling confident it will be warm enough!

April 8th - This is the day of the solar eclipse. All students have received a pair of eclipse glasses and been exposed to information about the eclipse.

6th Grade Parents - Don't forget that your Camp Joy deposits are due right after break.

All Parents - if interested in sharing your expertise, don't forget to complete the parent resources survey sent out last week.

A separate email was sent to parents with a list of all our Summer Camps, hosted by our teachers.

I hope that you spend time as a family this break. Schedule time for mass, family fun, and do something nice for another!

Blessings,

Heely M. Aug

COOK'S CURRICULUM CORNER

Our students have been actively engaged in learning about the upcoming solar eclipse during STEM time in the library. Students have been exploring what to expect and where to witness the complete totality of this natural phenomenon. The students are anxious to experience the difference in nature and animals during the full totality. All students are coming home with certified glasses that are safe for viewing the solar eclipse on April 8th!

Download the free app Totality by Big Kid Science to learn more about the upcoming solar eclipse. The app is owned by the American Astronomical Society and provides activities to learn more about eclipses as well as an interactive map that shows exactly what you will see at any location in the world on April 8th during the solar eclipse.

SOLAR ECLIPSE

All students will receive a pair of Solar Eclipse glasses this week. Students in grades 4-8th are bringing home their solar eclipse glasses this week after their STEM class. They need to bring them back after Spring break for a solar lesson in their COSI Stem boxes. Please help your child remember to put their solar eclipse glasses in their backpack after safely viewing the eclipse on April 8th!

There is an information sheet attached that provides an overview of the Solar Eclipse

A North American Total Eclipse of the Sun

Monday, April 8, 2024

An Information Sheet by astronomers/educators Dennis Schatz & Andrew Fraknoi

Distributed courtesy of the National Science Teaching Association

On April 8, 2024, there will be a spectacular total eclipse of the Sun, visible on a narrow path that stretches from western Mexico through Texas, and then northeastward toward New York, New England and eastern Canada. In such a total eclipse, the Moon exactly covers the Sun, and our star's faint atmosphere (the corona) becomes visible. Everyone else in North and Central America will see a partial eclipse of the Sun, with a bigger "bite" taken out of the Sun the closer you are to the path of the total eclipse.

If you are on the path, when only a sliver of sunlight remains visible, your surroundings will begin to darken, as if the Sun were setting in the middle of the day. Temperatures will drop and birds will go to roost, thinking that night is coming. Finally, the Sun will be totally covered and the beautiful solar atmosphere (the corona) will become visible. Totality will last four minutes or less and then the Sun will slowly be uncovered.

The path of the total eclipse. (Credit: Xavier Jubier)

Most people in North America will see a partial eclipse.

Only those people in the narrow path of totality will see the total eclipse.

We talked about the total eclipse in class, so your child should be able to tell you more about what to expect. At the top of this page is information for what will happen in your location. Hopefully, the skies will be clear and you can get a great view of this rare astronomical event. There will not be another total eclipse visible in the continental U.S. until 2045.

You can find out what will happen at other locations by going to: www.timeanddate.com/eclipse/solar/2024-april-8

There are many indirect ways to observe the eclipse, so having solar-viewing glasses is not required. Most homes already have the perfect pinhole projector to produce multiple images of the partially eclipsed Sun—a colander. To use it during the eclipse, stand with your back to the Sun and hold up a colander so that the Sun's light shines through it on the ground or a wall where there will be many tiny images of the eclipsed Sun in the Colander's shadow.

Another easy method to observe the eclipse is to take two pieces of cardboard or thick paper. Put a pinhole in one (taking care to make a small, neat hole). Then, stand with your back to the Sun and let the Sun's light fall through the hole and onto the other sheet. You'll get a small but distinct image of the Sun. (A way to get a sharper pinhole is to cut a square out of the middle of one piece of cardboard, tape a sheet of aluminum foil over the hole, and put the pinhole in the foil instead of the cardboard.) The farther apart the two pieces of cardboard or paper, the larger the image of the Sun will be (but it will be a small image in any case).

Observing the Sun Safely

Because some part of the Sun will be showing during most of this eclipse, it will be important to use safe-viewing strategies to protect your eyes. It is never safe to look directly at the Sun, except during the brief period of totality, when you can only see the faint solar corona by looking directly at the eclipsed Sun. Regular sunglasses, swimming goggles, and most camera filters are NOT safe for looking directly at the Sun. You can observe the Sun indirectly using the suggestions below. Or you can safely protect your eyes with certified solar-viewing glasses from your library or another reliable institution (such as a local science museum or college/high-school science department). Make sure that on the back, in small print, they say that they are ISO 12312-2 certified.
